

Sarah W. Murdock

The Nature Conservancy

Ms. Murdock serves as the Director of U.S. Climate Resilience and Water Policy at The Nature Conservancy. My 30-year career has spanned work in the public, private and now nonprofit sector on environmental and energy policy. In the past 14 years working at the Conservancy, Ms. Murdock's work has focused on policy, advocacy, communications, and executing projects that inform The Nature Conservancy's climate policy work. Currently, She manages the development and implementation of the Conservancy's climate resilience and water related policy positions. Prior to working at the Nature Conservancy, she served as a consultant working with environmental and energy clients to develop strategic solutions to government, regulatory, and community outreach challenges. Prior to being a consultant, she served on the staff of United States Senator John F. Kerry of Massachusetts concentrating on environmental and energy policy. She holds a B.A. in environmental science from Colby College and a M.A. in urban and environmental policy from Tufts University. She also completed the Sea Education Association semester of independent oceanographic research aboard 100-foot schooner. She is married, a mother to a teenage son, loves all active and inactive outdoor activities, and resides in Scituate, MA.
